The Eleventh Annual CiCe Network Conference
Malmö University, Sweden
21-23 May 2009

Human Rights and Citizenship Education

Main Conference Aims
The eleventh annual conference of the CiCe Network has a particular focus on human rights and citizenship education. We aim to bring together staff from higher education institutions who educate those in the education and social professions who work with children and young people. Papers at the conference will range from research findings to analysis of practice. We welcome all lecturers and researchers in universities and other higher education institutions with an interest in our themes, as well as those in NGOs and policy fields.

Research Student Conference
We will be preceding the Main Conference with our fourth Research Student Conference, on 20-21 May. This will include doctoral training sessions and the opportunity for research students to present papers to a smaller audience. Please see Call for papers_Student Conference_2009.doc for further information.

Themes
Children and students are developing their understanding of human rights in a complex and interdependent world, and the European context is a particularly interesting context in which to observe this. The conference focus is not only on what and how children and young people learn about human rights but is also concerned with their lived social and educational experiences of human rights, and how these impact on their developing understanding and participation as citizens. We welcome papers on this, and on teaching of citizenship-related issues in the areas of social, political, economic, history/geographic, cultural/arts and environmental education. There will be papers, workshops and plenary addresses.

Principal Speakers
- Professor Emeritus Sven-Eric Liedman (Gothenburg University, Sweden)
- Professor Mary Ratcliffe (University of Southampton, UK)
- Professor Luigi Cajani (University of Rome ‘La Sapienza’, Italy)
- Professor Alistair Ross (London Metropolitan University, UK)

Proposals for the Main Conference

Proposals are invited on the following themes: evolving identities, diversity, social exclusion-inclusion, identity, citizenship and intergroup relationships, historical culture, including sociological, political, historical, economic, psychological aspects, and all related pedagogical matters.

- A paper is a standard presentation, for which you will have 20 minutes to present and answer questions. We ask you to send a draft of your paper (not more than 4000 words) by 17 April. This will be available for delegates to download and read before they arrive, and you will be able to edit it after the conference before it is published. Your presentation will be grouped with papers on a similar theme.

- A symposium is a group of at least four linked papers, presented by a group together. The same rules apply as for papers (4000 words etc), but you will provide your own chairperson and your time will be limited to one conference session. Therefore, if there are many papers in a symposium then each paper will have less than 20 minutes. Symposium papers are normally presented grouped together in the conference publication.

- A workshop is an interactive session lasting 60-90 minutes, in which participants are doing more than answering questions! You will normally need to limit the maximum number of people who might be able to participate. Workshops are timetabled to run in parallel. You may wish to provide a written account of your workshop for the publication, in the form of a brief (maximum 4000 word) article.

- A poster is an opportunity to mount a standard poster (A1 size), explaining some research, ideas or expressions. You will have opportunity to stand by your poster and discuss it with members of the conference at some point during the event. Conference posters are not reproduced in the conference proceedings.

- Research Students can attend the Student Conference (where they can present papers) in addition to the main Conference. Please see additional information and forms or the CiCe website for further information on the Student Conference.
